

Cotton White Strand Woven Bamboo Flooring – Light, Gentle

Soon it would be summer, and it might just be the right time to renew your home. Verdee Bamboo proudly presents our colour series. The soft colour toned floorings can provide a totally different view for your home, and can keep you cool at the same time.

How does colour selection affect the temperature indoor?

According to the Federal Citizen Information Center, dark and dull house colours absorb 70 to 90 percent of radiant energy from exposure to sunlight. In contrast, light colours reflect away most of the heat, resulting in less buildup of heat inside.

Is there any other side effects?

Normal wood floorings face problems of heat expansion, high heat absorption rate and low resistance against humidity. High heat absorption rate does not only make you feel hot when stepping on the floor with bare foot, but also causes heat expansion. If not well installed the floorings may have to face the problem of cracking or bowing. Bamboo has a much lower heat absorption rate, which keeps the floorings cool and stable. Once installed properly it can last for a long time.

Apart from low heat absorption, the high density and special fiber structure also grants it a higher stability and lower moisture absorption rate.

Process of making Strand Woven Bamboo Flooring

Verdee Bamboo flooring is made of MOSO Bamboo which is over 5 years old. The bamboos are peeled into straps and glued with environmental friendly glue. It is then compressed under 2,000 tones pressure and form a huge column. It is then cut into suitable sizes and coated with KLUMP UV coatings of 7 layers, which make it highly scratch-resistant. During the whole production process dye and bleach is not used. Our strand woven bamboo floorings are E1 formaldehyde release standard approved, which is claimed to be safe to human use. It is also tougher and more durable than normal wooden floorings.
